

LICENSED INDUSTRY OVERVIEW: CONSUMER PROTECTION BC

OVERVIEW

Consumer Protection BC is a provincial regulator. While we have an administrative agreement with government to enforce BC's consumer protection laws, we operate at arm's length from government and on a cost-recovery business model. We license and regulate a variety of different sectors, regulate specific consumer transactions, classify general release motion pictures, respond to consumer inquiries, investigate alleged violations of BC's consumer protection laws and inform consumers and businesses about their rights and responsibilities under the law. All changes to the laws (as well as the creation of new law) lie with government.

BC'S CONSUMER PROTECTION LAWS

In BC, consumer rights are protected under several different laws – some are captured under the Acts and Regulations we administer, and some are overseen by other organizations. The laws we are responsible for enforcing include the Business Practices and Consumer Protection Act, the Cremation, Interment and Funeral Services Act, the Motion Picture Act, the Ticket Sales Act and a number of related Regulations. (Visit the About Us section of our website for links to these laws.)

When we receive questions or complaints about topics that fall outside of the laws we administer, we do our best to provide referrals to organizations with jurisdiction over the specific issue. If no such governing body exists, we may provide information about other possible avenues for dispute resolution, such as filing a complaint with the Better Business Bureau, seeking legal advice or disputing the issue through the Civil Resolution Tribunal or Small Claims Court.

MEDIA INTERVIEW REQUESTS

Interview requests and media inquiries should be directed to our Communications Coordinator, 778.747.0303 or media@consumerprotectionbc.ca.

Please note that we will not comment on topics that fall outside of the laws we administer, nor will we provide details about open investigations.
